Pebble Beach Sets Standard for Non-Polluting Vehicles

By Elizabeth Cowley

In April of 1995 the Pebble Beach Company introduced its compressed natural gas (CNG) fueled vehicle program; the only private company in Monterey County to do so. Pebble Beach Company converted 4 vehicles to CNG for both the environmental benefit of lower vehicle emissions and lower fuel costs. As gasoline prices soar, Pebble Beach Company is realizing more fuel cost savings than anticipated as its CNG costs only $.425 per equivalent gasoline gallon.

Mike Cueto, Service Manager of Fleet Maintenance for Pebble Beach Company, said the CNG vehicles "give us control - over the environment and the cost" adding that because the vehicles operate cleaner, they need less maintenance.

Overall, CNG vehicles burn about 30% cleaner than their gasoline counterparts. CNG vehicles emit only a few tenths of a gram of carbon monoxide per mile compared to 3.5 grams from a gasoline vehicle and CNG vehicles do not emit soot and emit less carbon dioxide than gasoline vehicles. Carbon monoxide is toxic and a contributor to a myriad of respiratory diseases and cancers and is one of 7 emissions restricted under the Clean Air Act of 1970.

CNG fueled vehicles are becoming increasingly popular - and available. Ford and Chrysler now offer CNG vehicles that cost about $5,000 over their gasoline counterparts. Currently there are over 6,000 CNG vehicles in California; locally, PG&E has 20, Monterey County has 46 and Monterey-Salinas Transit has 10

TOUCHING BASES

Peter Lyon

"As of someone gently knocking" quoth Edgar Allan Poe. The author of The Black Cat (the day the Lions really beat up on the Tigers) must have foretold the annual Carmel Valley Little League fundraising candy sale, now going on in a neighborhood near you. When one of our eternally appealing Little Leaguers shows up at your door, dig deep. In an era of budget shortfalls we don't want to fall short of supporting the worthwhile cause of Baseball in Paradise. If you don't want to shell out for candy, go for the protein: the kids also have beef jerky for sale. Editorial note: the fact that both candy and beef jerky make one thirsty has not been lost on the purveyors of cooling drinks at the world-famous Snack Bar located on the edge of the world's loveliest baseball park. Dig deep for those drinks as well. Profits are only honorable in our own country.

A question for Gary Pennington: how's the jinx doing?

As the season moves into full swing, so to speak, we should once again like to remind you of a few very simple courtesies endemic to CVLL. First, cheer for everyone. Your kid's opponents on the field may be his best buddies in the classroom. No one in that lovely ballpark, no player, no coach, no umpire, deserves anything less than the warmest support. In a perfect world, every pitcher would throw fifty-four strikes; every batter would hit a homerun, every shortstop would snag eighteen grounders, every fielder would haul down eighteen eighteen one-handed, two-steps-to-the-right fly balls, each catcher would gun down eighteen runners, every manager would have twelve sturdy deep-voiced eleven-and-a-half year olds who were already shaving,, and every parent would glow with pride at every effort displayed on the field, no matter whose kid performed.

Next thought: remember to arrive at the park via Paso Cresta and leave via Paso Hondo, lest Wally LeValley sic his dog on you. And many thanks to all of those of you who drive so carefully within the confines of the park. Some of those little folk, although mighty quick, are no match for a Buick Behemoth or a 4x4 Nissan Lugubria.

It may be environmentally correct for Jim Conrad to leave behind a two-pound pile of sunflower seed shells after every Tigers' game--the birds love him--but we'd like to remind some others of you, gently: birds don't eat styrofoam or navigate well in french-fry boats. Please patronize the snack bar vigorously, then deposit all ensuing paper and plastic in the trash cans, not under, around, or on the bleachers.

Thanks for keeping all tobacco products a very long way away from where the kids are--like about five miles. And thanks also for keeping dear old Fido at home or snoring peacefully in the back of the car.

Now for a bit of back-bleacher umpiring. Here are a few situations where you are called upon to make an umpire's decision. Correct answers may be published soon if we can find them.

1. The Indians are beating up on--let's say, the San Francisco Giants. Sam Strong smashes a line drive into right field but overruns first base. He makes no attempt to go to second. The right fielder--was that Glenallen Hill?--fires the ball to the first baseman who tags Sam before he gets back to the bag. Is he out?

Lion's starting pitcher Nick Buich held the Falcons to two runs through three innings. The Lions went on to win 8-5, on an opening day that featured lots of fun for all. photo - Peter Lyon

2. In the late innings of a close game betwen the Tigers and the Falcons, the home team (Falcons) get a runner to third. To guard against an unlikely wild pitch from Pat Lyon or a passed ball beyond Nathan Adams, Glen Nolte brings in his right fielder, Casey O'Neal, to play behind the catcher and umpire. Is this a legal move, even for a lawyer-manager?

3. The Broncos are playing the Cubs. Alejandro Osornio is on first; Cache Tucker hits a fly to Ashley Harris. As the ball hits Ashley's glove, Alejandro tags up and breaks for second. The ball is juggled but Ashley makes the catch before the ball hits the ground. John Bevier appeals that Alejandro left his base before the ball was caught. Is Alejandro out for leaving the bag too soon?

4. It's the Braves v. the Eagles in a head-to-head battle. Taylor Corso is on first, Ron Turner occupies third. Patrick Parsel smashes a hot ground ball betwen the legs of Chris Waddell, who has been doing an excellent job at first, but the ball strikes Taylor breaking for second. Who's out?

5. The Hornets and the Pirates are in a tight contest, with one out in the bottom of the third. Chris Hawley laces a double to left field. Hatton Vandervort, who was on second, scores , but Ben Britten, who was on first, is thrown out at the plate by James Warren. Chris advances to second safely but is declared out on appeal for missing first. Does Hatton's run score?

Would you like answers to these dilemmae? Who will care by next fall? Please read ensuing columns. If we can't acquire the answers legitimately, we'll ask such local experts as Messers Lazzaro, Belleci, de Salvo, Tugwell, Herro, or that really Wise guy, Rich. However, we might have to bring in local Jim experts like Kelsey or Kennaday.

Last word for April: many thanks to all you fans lounged in the stands and draped along the third base fence who have continued to maintain the high standards of parental sportsmanship which is the hallmark of CVLL play. Support and love your player; support and love every player. This is Baseball in Paradise.

CUSD Takes $400,000 Loan to Improve Energy Efficiency

Assemblyman Bruce McPherson announced that the Carmel Unified School District will install energy efficient lighting and make other energy improvement to all its schools, thanks to a $400,000 low interest loan approved by the California Energy Commission.

The improvements will save the district nearly $63,000 a year on its utility bills.

"The Carmel Unified School District will cut its yearly utility bill by an estimated 28 percent with these projects," said McPherson. "In a little more than six years, the district will have saved enough on its utility bills to pay for the entire project, and the local school district will enjoy cost savings for years to come."

"Exceed Your Expectations"

FUN IN THE SUN

Dave Lyon

Hey, pre-summer fever is like, busting out all over the place, and the folks down at the Community Center are gearing up for another great season in the sun.

Yes, everyone's favorite watering hole, the Community Pool, will be opening this Saturday, May 4th, at noon. Kids: come on down and checkout the brand new 12 foot pool slide. Uncle Rick Simms sez: "All you kid-at-heart adults can use the pool slide, too, no pushing and shoving, please." Rick will be there on opening day to hand out $20 bills to anyone crazy enough to go down the slide head first. (Not). This new slide is made possible by the many supporting members of the CVCYC.

The Community Pool will now be open on weekends only, including Memorial Day, from noon until 5 p.m., until the 16th of June, when the pool moves to full-time summer schedule. Starting June 17th, the pool will be open everyday for recreational swimming from noon until 5 p.m. On weekends the pool is open from noon to 6 p.m. Friday night is family swim night from 7 to 9 p.m. and on weekdays from 6 to 7 p.m. the pool will be available for adult lap swim.

Okay, everyone wants to know about Swim Lessons. The lesson schedule will run in four sessions this year: June 17-28, July 1-12, July 15-26, and July 29-August 9. There will be three starting time slots daily: 9:45, 10:30 and 11:15. Classes will be offered in beginning, intermediate, and advanced, and all class levels will be offered at each class time.

Swim lesson class size is limited. Swim lesson sign-ups will begin May 4 at the pool, and will continue through June on weekends during regular recreational swim hours. Please come to the pool in person to enroll your child. Swim cards, CVCYC memberships and season swim passes may also be purchased at the pool office anytime during recreational swim hours.

Okay, everyone who paid too much in taxes this last month raise their hand. Okay, everyone who needs more deductions for next year raise your pen and repeat after me: "I will be proud to send a $25 tax-deductible contribution to the Carmel Valley Community Center." Yes, it's that time of year again. The membership renewal forms have gone out in the mail, and the volunteer board at the CVCYC is calling on everyone to renew or become a supporting members of your Community Center.

Memberships purchased now will be good for the entire '96 season, and will entitle you to a 1/3 discount on pool admission, a reduced rate on swim lessons, plus a reduction on Community Park and Community Center facility rental rates. Your support makes it possible for the Community Center to operate and maintain the Community Pool, the beautiful Community Park, plus offer a variety of classes, programs and events throughout the year.

If you have recently received your renewal form, please take a moment to make your pledge of support and return it to the CVCYC. Membership forms will also be available at the CV Post Office through the month of May, or at the Community Pool office anytime during the season.

Free picnic ants. Act now and take advantage of this limited time offer. The Community Park is the perfect place to hold your family, group, or business picnic or bbq, and the first lucky 10 CVCYC members who reserve a spot in the park this month will receive a case of free picnic ants.

But wait, there's more. The wonderful Community Park Gazebo is the perfect place for weddings of any size, and, if you book your ceremony anytime before the end of June, a CVCYC board member will personally accompany you on your honeymoon at no additional cost. Imagine having your own personal board member along to taste test all your alcoholic drinks, plus sample all that suspicious foreign food. Don't delay, reserve your wedding spot now. Some restrictions apply, airfare not included.

Yes, the Community Park, with its wonderful bbq areas and beautiful gazebo is available throughout the season for your group or family get-togethers, picnics and parties. Reservations are strongly recommended for large gatherings. Complete information is available by contacting Lee Rieman at 659-5287.

SPCA Desperate for Volunteers

The SPCA of Monterey County is desperately in need of volunteers for its Wildlife Center. These volunteers are needed to feed the hundreds of baby birds that will find their way to the center for help this spring.

"Baby birds aren't like other baby animals," says Wildlife Center worker Melissa Castner. "These tiny babies must be fed, in most cases, every 15 minutes. Without this constant care, they will die."

Each spring, locals find hundreds of birds that have fallen out of trees or for some reason have been abandoned by their mothers. The Wildlife Center begins getting these nestlings in late April, and can have more than a hundred birds needing care at any given time during the spring and early summer months.

"We need volunteers who can commit to a four hour shift once a week," says Castner. "We are short 10-20 volunteers and that's not good. If we can't fill those positions, we simply can't feed all those hungry, chirping mouths. While the work here is intense, the rewards are great, because you can see the birds you cared for return to the wild."

If you are interested in helping the SPCA's Wildlife Center, call 422-4721 or 373-2631, ext. 230.

A Long and Bumpy Road

Bet you think that when Cal-Am and CalTrans finish the new water-main installation under the east bound lane of Carmel Valley Road, they will resurface the entire road surface.

Wrong!

What Cal-Am will give drivers, bikers and runners, along Carmel Valley Road from Carmel Rancho at the mouth of the Valley to Valley Hills just past Quail Lodge, is a patchwork of slurry and chip which will only cover the portions of road that were cut to install the pipeline and newly signalized intersection at Middle School.

This means that the road will look like a half finished quilt and will not be much less bumpy than it is now, as the right and left wheels of your car traverse different road surfaces.

We have all seen drivers steering over the double-yellow line to avoid the bone jarring bumps remaining after the Cal-Am work.

Now...you must remember that Cal-Am is the same Southern California outfit that has been over-pumping the Carmel Valley aquifer for many decades, according to the State Water Board.

They are also the same folks who charge for water at rates that are right at the top of all water rates in the whole nation...And much of the water they pump into our homes is of such questionable quality that great numbers of you either buy bottled water or have a home filtration system.

Let us get back to Carmel Valley Road. For something less than $50,000 Cal-Am could chip and slurry the entire east bound lane, from edge of shoulder to the center line, giving a much smoother, though less than perfect, ride.

The responsibility here rests squarely with Cal-Am, CalTrans and County Public Works; not with the fine, friendly, on-time work by the contractor. Cal-Am's goal was to install the larger new pipeline to utilize the Valley aquifer as a water source.

It is unreasonable and unfair for Cal-Am to have the benefit of using a public road for their profit and leave the Valley's only through road in dis-repair.

Now is the time to express your concerns. Call or write: 5th District Supervisor Sam Karas, 1200 Aguajito Rd., Monterey, 93940; 2nd District Supervisor Judy Pennycook, 1000 S. Main, Salinas, 93902; Cal-Am 50 Ragsdale Drive, Monterey, 93940; County Public Works 647-7748, CalTrans, 2111 Garden Road., Monterey, 93940.

WHAT'S NEXT?
Mel Vercoe

Another nice letter from President Clinton, this one in reply to one of mine complaining, as usual, about our spending so much money trying to solve problems on the other side of oceans, when we have to scrape for our nickels and dimes trying to solve our own problems. I keep telling him that I think he means well, but that we are bankrupt, and that we have no business masquerading all over the plant as one of the "Seven Richest Nations", when we're so broke we have come up with yet another "sweep the problem under the rug for seven years" plan to get enough credit to bring our interest payments up to date to avoid declaring bankruptcy.

Is it possible that some faction of some sort has conspired to keep our President from learning the truth about our financial condition, for fear he might shut off some popular projects. Well, why not? Imagine the consternation within our military-industrial complex, and our foreign lobbyists, and members of Congress, (depending on our keeping our forces in Bosnia, South Korea, Japan, and ready to come to the aid of our sworn ally, Israel, in its determined effort to remove all Arabs from the choicer parts of the Middle East), if our President should suddenly decide to let Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Israel, et al, finance their own "national securities."

It would ruin our thriving pork-barrel industry. How could we justify new contracts for fighter planes, war tanks, etc., if we couldn't deplete our supplies with gifts to "our friends"? And, how could we keep thousands of laid-off Pentagon and C.I.A. employees "off the streets", maybe rioting, if somebody in authority in Washington should suddenly decide that U.S. domestic policy should have equal priority with foreign giveaway policies?

LETTERS
to the Editor

Flood Planning for The Future

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

To property owners in the Mission Fields and Crossroads areas of Carmel:

My name is Bob Bogardus and I live on Fisher Drive in Mission Fields. Since the floods last year, I have become heavily involved in efforts to reduce the likelihood of future flooding in our area. Today, I find myself the Co-Chair of the Carmel River Coalition, Secretary of the SCA#50 Advisory Committee, and Treasurer/Editor of the Mission Fields Neighborhood Association.

This letter is to help clarify the complementary roles of the proposed Flood Control Zone for Carmel Valley and the Levee Project being considered for our area at the mouth of the Carmel River.

Flood Control is a service that is not provided out of other tax revenue. Any flood control project must be funded by special assessments levied on those who benefit from the work. In their report to the Board of Supervisors, last June, the Carmel River Flood Task Force proposed two complementary flood control efforts in Carmel Valley, each with its own separate funding:

1. Projects and services of benefit to all Carmel Valley would be funded by a benefit assessment from a Flood Control Zone encompassing the entire valley.

2. Any special projects which only benefit a small area would not be funded by the Flood Control Zone, but rather by a sub-zone comprised of those property owners requesting and benefiting from this project.

The flood control project that you are familiar with, our "Levee Project", is of the second type. The Lower Carmel River Flood Control Project (the Nolte Project) affects the levees protecting the north bank of the Carmel River in the area of Highway 1 and Rio Road. This project is of significant benefit to us, but of no direct benefit to anyone else in the valley. Many of us have been working hard to establish a local assessment area (CSA#50) to provide funds for the Nolte Project. The homeowners and businesses on the east side of Highway 1 are currently being invited to join this CSA so that work on this project may begin. (Supervisor Karas will be chairing a meeting to present information and answer questions on the proposed CSA #50 expansion on Wednesday, April 24.)

The first item, the proposed Flood Control Zone, is a separate project, with a separate (additional) assessment. It will provide us with critical benefits which CSA#50 cannot provide. Some of these include:

1. Operation and maintenance of an Alert Flood Warning System to keep track of river levels and give us time to prepare for oncoming high water.

2. Routine maintenance of our levee.

3. Helping to stabilize the river upstream by keeping the center of the river channel clear of islands, sandbars, and protruding or choking vegetation. (When present, these obstacles force the river aside and into the banks, sending volumes of sediment, trees, and other large debris our way. The Hwy. 1 bridge was destroyed by such material.

4. Providing flood control experts who will keep track of the Carmel River and identify projects that would increase our level of protection

We need both the Nolte Project and the Carmel Valley Flood Control Zone to provide safety for our families, businesses and property. I hope you will give these proposals serious consideration.

Group Acts to Protect County From Wild Growth

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

In 1990 Napa County passed an initiative, 2020 Vision, that took future decisions affecting agricultural land out of the hands of the county supervisors. A movement is now in progress to pass a similar initiative in Monterey County. Called "Protect" (Protect resources of the entire county today), it states that land designated as agricultural or resource conservation cannot be changed to commercial or residential use without a vote of the people.

The same San Francisco law firm that successfully defended the Napa County initiative before the California Supreme Court in 1995 drafted this initiative to protect our agricultural lands and natural resources.

We must stop the supervisors from granting exceptions to the current zoning laws established by our General Plan in 1982 and nibbling away at our open spaces and ranches. Please sign the Protect petition that you will see volunteers circulating in public places before May 14, so that it can be on the regular November ballot.

Anyone interested in helping write to Protect, P. O. Box 5939, Monterey, 93944, or call 633-6098; fax 633-5784.

If Monterey County can't be saved, then no place can.

support vehicles fueled by CNG. Last year the Pebble Beach Company paid $5,000 per converted vehicle and $4,500 per fueling station. The initial CNG conversion is expensive however, federal, state and local subsidies are available and as CNG vehicles become more popular the cost of the vehicles and fueling stations is likely to come down.

Conceivably, every home could have a natural gas fueling station using existing gas lines. In addition to burning cleaner, natural gas currently costs about 70% less than an equivalent amount of gasoline. Natural gas is supplied domestically and from Canada, our NAFTA partner to the north, and thus less subject to politically induced price fluctuations.

PG&E has two CNG fueling stations, one in Salinas and one in Santa Cruz, at which CNG costs $.825 per equivalent gasoline gallon. The PG&E fuel stations provide natural gas which is already compressed, thus the price is higher than from a domestic natural gas line but fueling takes less time. The Pebble Beach Company has two fueling stations which are hooked up to the existing gas service line and the gas is compressed during fueling, which takes many hours, but the cost is only $.425 per equivalent gasoline gallon.

The Pebble Beach Company's CNG vehicles can travel about 120 miles on a CNG fill up but are also equipped with a gasoline tank that can be switched on if the CNG runs out at an inconvenient location. The only problem the Pebble Beach Company has had with the CNG vehicles is that the switch that changes the fuel source from CNG to gasoline is on a similar frequency as the radio. Pebble Beach Company has converted the electronic switches to manual ones. Pebble Beach Company intends to expand its fleet of CNG vehicles as soon as it buys a faster fueling station which is in this years budget.

Leave Your Car and Ride Your Bike

The Transportation Agency for Monterey County and the Monterey County Health Department Injury Prevention Program announce that the Second Annual Monterey County Bike Day will be held throughout Monterey County on May 16, 1996.

All residents and workers in Monterey county are encouraged to try using their bicycles as their primary form of transportation for the day.

Those who walk as their primary transportation mode for the day may also participate in the event.

Refreshment stands will be placed throughout Monterey county during the 7 to 9 a.m. early morning commute hours. These refreshment stands, called "Pit Stops", will provide free bagels, juice and coffee to event participants.

Participants are urged to register for the event. Registration cards can be obtained at any library or city hall in Monterey County. All persons who register for the event are eligible for prizes donated by local businesses.

Participants whose registration cards are received by the TAMC office by April 26 can receive a free bicycle safety check from Bobcat Bicycles in Salinas. Those who submit their registration cards first to the TAMC office will receive a coupon from Fresh International for a free salad package.

Employers are encouraged to make a safe place to store their bicycles and equipment available to their employees and to allow flexible work schedules to employees who participate to allow for delayed arrival times. Employers may wish to provide additional refreshments to event participants as well.

Event sponsors include the Bagel Bakery and the Pebble Beach Company, KJMY and KKAT.

Event tee shirts can be purchased for $10 each. To order call 755-8961.

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 8 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level.

A computer can have many different types of files; some are system files that relate to the os, and some are applications, often abbreviated to apps. A way to distinguish files is to group them under various extensions. For example, if you write a letter to your pussycat and you want to save it in ASCII format, you would name it something like pussy1.txt, where pussy 1 is the name of your first letter to pussy and the .txt is the extension for ASCII or text files, which are unformatted. The word processor Word usually saves them with the .doc extension, in this case pussy1.doc, which is now a formatted file. Pictures, graphics, as they are often called, can be stored with various extensions, also again depending on the way they are formatted. Examples of graphic extensions are .gif, .tif, .tga, .jpg. Windows has a primitive word processor called Write and it saves with the extension .wri. System and apps files can have extensions like .bat, .cmd, .exe (for batch, command, and executable, respectively.)

If you are in the habit of writing to other peoples' pussycats, you could put all the files into a Pussycat Directory. Computers generally have many directories, with the Root directory containing critical files relating to the operating system. This directory, however, does not carry a label. Labelled directories could be: finance, correspondence, conquests.

Most files are kept on the hard drive (hd) and, for portability, some are kept on floppy diskettes. The floppies are written to, or read from, by placing the diskette in the floppy drive (fd) and giving the save, or open, command. These drives are given labels so that the computer os can tell which is which. If you have only one hd in your system, it is almost always called the c drive which, to the computer os, is the c: drive. If you add a second hd it would be called the d drive. Similarly fds are called the a and/or b drives. The root directory is usually c:.

With the earlier Dos os, when the computer is switched on, the os loads, or "boots", as it is commonly described. It then writes some system information to the screen that ends with c:\>, which is called the c prompt. When this appears the os is loaded and you can now proceed to run some apps. When an application is installed in the computer it always has an executable .exe file. For example a word processor may have one called wp.exe, and the files related to that app would be located in a directory called, say, wp. The first step to run this app is to enter the wp directory with a command like cd wp (change directory to wp) and then to type wp. Since there is a wp.exe executable file there, the application will start (execute) and open a new "window" i.e. the screen changes. What it now looks like depends on that particular app. In the earlier days there could be a plain screen and the F keys on the keyboard used to perform operations e.g F1 could be a help file with help information about the app, F2 could be to open a file, F3 to save it, F4 to print it, etc. These keys had different roles in each app and templates that fit over the keyboard were often supplied on which were written the functions of the keys. Little by little these apps became easier to use.

My dictionary doesn't have a definition of "pheromone", so I looked it up on the Internet. Cornell University defines pheromones as "chemicals emitted by living organisms to send messages to individuals of the same species." Apparently the first work with pheromones was done with silk moths in 1959, and subsequently it has been determined that pheromones are used to leave odor trails to food, as alarm signals, for identifying mates and for controlling co-workers. Cornell's current pheromone project deals with trapping the brown-banded cockroach. The Swedes, the Canadians, and Dr. Sonny B. Ramaswamy in Mississippi report successes with pheromones in the pest control industry, particularly against the Grape Berry Moth, the Oriental Fruit Moth, and the Pink Bollworm. One tactic is to release pheromones from numerous sources placed in the field; the males are then unable to locate the females and the number of offspring are reduced.

An outfit in Canada can sell you traps, lures and attractants involving pheromones as part of their "integrated pest control" line of products. For $24.95 (two for $40), an outfit in Florida can sell you "The Scent" which promises to attract women using Androstenone. Dr. Cutler at The Athena Institute admits her stuff doesn't work for everybody, but her lure for men is $98.50 a bottle; $99.50 a bottle for women.

An outfit in Milpitas claims they are making the only products that can contain a human pheromone component, and their stuff did well enough over the holidays to generate an eight-fold sales growth during the twelve months ended December 31, 1995. You can buy their products at Macy's now. You can't smell the pheromone in their fragrances and toiletries, but their experts are convinced if you are wearing it, someone of the opposite sex will feel better when you are around. More to the point, the company has gone cash-positive in a year and a half. Forget the pheromone, look for the stock. If such an investment succeeds, everybody will feel better when you are around.

Local Couple is Proud of Their Franchise

Jim and Jill Sleeper, owners of Mail Boxes, Etc. (MBE) report that the world's largest franchisor of neighborhood postal, business and communications service centers has expanded its global network to 3000 service centers, with the opening of a new MBE center in Rome, Italy.

"We opened our MBE Center in Carmel on 10-31-86 and our local network of MBE Centers has grown to 19, with an additional 6 centers in San Luis Obispo County, within the past 10 years", said Jim Sleeper, owner of the Carmel store located in the Crossroads Shopping Center. "The flexibility of the MBE concept has enabled me, as a business owner, to meet the needs of business and retail customers on a local level."

Each Mail Boxes, Etc. center is independently owned and operated. In Carmel and Carmel Valley MBE are located at the Crossroads and MidValley Shopping Centers.

Coalition of Groups Aims to Protect Agricultural and Scenic Land

A coalition of public interest groups called PROTECT (Protect Resources of the Entire County Today) filed an initiative with Monterey County on March 21, 1996 for the purpose of protecting Monterey County's agricultural lands, natural resources, and the quality and quantity of its water supply. Hoping to prevent leap-frog development PROTECT also seeks to prevent further congestion of roadways and highways within the County. The name of the initiative is the "Agricultural Land and Resource Conservation Initiative, or ALCRI.

Until 2025, the initiative prohibits changing the land use designation of Agricultural or Resource Conservation Land (as described in the current Monterey County General Plan) unless voted on by the people, or redesignated by the Board of Supervisors (only after complying with five specific conditions outlined in the initiative), or unless the land is annexed to a city or town.

Agricultural land supports a $2 billion per year industry in the County, and Resource Conservation lands protect environmentally sensitive areas, scenic resources, and open spaces which are essential to recharge diminishing aquifers. The group believes that scenic attractions bring significant tourism revenue to the County and support more than 16,000 jobs.

The Monterey County General plan requires the Board of Supervisors to safeguard water supplies; it states: "The County shall not allow water consuming development in areas which do not have proven adequate water supplies." The initiative reaffirms that commitment and requires substantial evidence to prove adequate water quality and supply before the Board of Supervisors can redesignate land from one land use category to another.

The members of the Steering Committee of PROTECT are: Michael Weaver of Salinas, Ken Mar of Prunedale, Sally Slichter of Moss Landing, Sharon Parsons of Chualar and Clark Beck of Monterey. They must gather over 9000 signatures by May 13, 1996 in order to qualify for the November, 1996 ballot.

The PROTECT coalition includes the Highway 68 Coalition, SMILE (Save Moss Landing's Indians, Land & Environment) and the South County Coalition.

The Relationship Between Transit and Land Use

Monterey-Salinas Transit has released "Designing for Transit: A Manual for Integrating Public Transportation and Land Use in Monterey County." This manual was created to help policy makers, administrators, planners, engineers, and developers understand how to design projects which support transit use.

This manual provides suggestions for developing communities in ways that support all forms of transportation, including transit. According to MST Board Chairman Jim Collins, "The physical environment in which transit operates is critical to the quality of service that is offered. If the suggestions provided in "Designing for Transit..." are incorporated into projects early in their design, providing transit access will have little or no cost impact for the developer or the community while enhancing the ability of transit operators to serve these new developments."

Transit and alternative transportation can greatly improve the quality of our communities. The benefits of an effective transit program include decreased traffic congestion, less space needed for parking, more pedestrian activity, greater mobility for citizens, and reduced air pollution. "Including the suggestions provided in this manual in new developments will ensure that these benefits can be maximized," Collins said.

"Designing for Transit..." advocates providing transportation options for pedestrians, transit riders, bicycles, as well as automobiles. "Success in using the guidelines requires a change in how we approach the issue of transportation planning", Collins stated. "Instead of relying upon a single minded effort to accommodate automobiles, both public planners and private developers must consider reopening our communities to travel of all sorts."

"Designing for Transit..." has five sections. The first section provides an introduction and historical information about transit in Monterey County. It also describes the need for the coordination of transit service with land development. The second section identifies ten ways to design more transit oriented communities. Section three discusses how local policies and the planning process can foster the creation of transit oriented communities. The fourth section provides specific design standards for public transportation facilities and vehicles. This section should be helpful to engineers and architects in developing detailed development plans. Finally, the last section of the manual discusses transit centers, transit exchanges, and Park & Ride facilities.
